

Los Angeles Child Guidance Clinic

Policy and Training Institute

Core Competency: Brain Development, Attachment, & Trauma

Quint Paige, MFT, RPT-S

Policy and Training Institute Training Coordinator
Adjunct Faculty at Pacific Oaks College

This beginning level training will utilize theory and practice from Dr. Connie Lillas, and other key early childhood experts to help participants describe key physical changes in prenatal and infant brain development, and explain foundational interaction between brain development, arousal states, stress responses, and attachment patterns. Additionally this workshop focuses on the physical and mental health effects of Adverse Childhood Experiences (ACEs)/early trauma and how these effects can be ameliorated by neuroplasticity and positive relationships. Participants will learn to apply core concepts of the neurorelational framework to view parent-child interaction and infant/toddler behavior and symptoms, as well as use “bottom-up” strategies and tools to assess and intervene with parent-child dyads. This workshop counts toward knowledge domain training hours required for those seeking CA IFECMH endorsement.
